

About ICC Assessor and Presenter Training

What is it?

The ICC Assessor and Presenter Training modules have been developed to help people present and assess training to coaches, administrators and officials, and can act as a pre-requisite for the delivery of educational programmes covering the different aspects of cricket coaching, officiating and administration.

How does it work?

If you wish to undertake or even deliver the ICC Assessor and Presenter Training, and enjoy the benefits it can bring to cricket stakeholders in your country, you can simply contact your regional office – each of which now has a representative who can assist you in this area.

The ICC Assessor and Presenter Training courses are two single-day courses which can be run separately, or together as a combined two day course, which cover the skills, information and resources needed to present and assess education. Each course contains an assessment, which requires participants to demonstrate their competency in the many aspects of presenting and assessing training. Members can implement the ICC Assessor and Presenter Training modules as pre-requisites for individuals to deliver coaching, officiating, administration and other cricket education. Along with having completed this training, presenters and assessors should also have skills in the subject area in which they are presenting or assessing training.

Why was it developed?

The ICC Assessor and Presenter Training was developed in response to feedback from Members. The modules have been designed to develop:

Assessors who can

1. Deliver valid, reliable, flexible and fair assessments, and

Presenters who can:

1. Plan and run good training programmes
2. Meet the learning needs of all participants
3. Review and improve their training sessions.

Assessors and presenters are very important to the success of sport education programmes. They make sure skilled people are providing the right educational support to coaches, administrators, officials and players around the world.

Who can use it and when?

The ICC Assessor and Presenter Training modules are available free of charge for all ICC Members. The courses are currently being piloted by a small number of Members throughout our 5 regions, and are available for all Members on request.
